James Phillips House
Venton vicinity
private

c. 1880-1900

Located at the end of a long dirt farmlane, this two-story side hall/parlor frame house has been extensively reworked. The general form of the farmhouse has been maintained, but modern-sized sash windows and asbestos shingles disguise the age of the house.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The James Philips house stands at the end of a dirt farm lane that intersects Drawbridge Road near Venton, Somerset County, Maryland. The two-story side hall/parlor frame house faces north with the principal gable oriented on an east/west axis. The Little Monie Creek forms the southern boundary to the property.

Built during the last decades of the nineteenth century, the asbestos clad frame house is supported by a brick pier foundation and covered with a steeply pitched asphalt shingle roof. A two-story service wing extends to the rear, and a modern addition has been attached to the east gable end of the main block.

The north (main) facade is two bays across with a side entrance in the west bay and a large multi-pane window to the east. The second floor is lighted by two small replacement jalousie windows. The eaves to the roof are extended, and an off-center brick chimney protrudes through the roof.

The west gable end has a single six-over-six sash window lighting the second floor and attic. The eaves extend approximately a foot from the wall surface. The east gable end is covered on the first floor by a modern living room addition with a larger jalousie window.

The south side of the main block is fully covered by the two-story one-room plan wing which is detailed in the same manner as the main block. Six-over-six sash windows light the first and second floors, and a narrow brick stack rises through the gable roof. Attached to the south side of the two-story wing is a story-and-a-half kitchen, and extending from the south side of the kitchen is a single-story section covered by a hip roof. The exterior details follow in the same manner as the rest of the house.

Inside, the house has been remodeled, but the side hall staircase remains intact. A heavily turned newel post and turned balusters support a molded handrail. The living room, dining room and kitchen have been reworked with modern materials.
